Learn how you can pursue a degree not available in your home state — yet pay in-state rates!

You can earn a degree in specialized programs such as meteorology, medical illustration, dance performance and dozens more through the ACM.

What is the ACM?

The Academic Common Market is a tuition-savings program especially for college students who live in the 16 states that are members of the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB), a nonprofit education organization.

If you live in an SREB state,* you may be able to enroll in an eligible degree program offered in another SREB state — but pay in-state tuition rates. Joining the ACM can save you thousands of dollars over the course of your studies.

More than 2,000 students currently participate in the ACM in more than 1,800 programs at 149 institutions. The next one could be you!

How do I participate in the ACM?

It's simple. You must:

1. *live in one of the 16 SREB states
2. select an eligible program for residents of your state
3. be admitted to the institution offering the program, and
4. certify residency in your state.

Sounds great. How do I sign up?

First, go to the Web site for more information. Search the eligible ACM programs and institutions for your home state.

Contact the institution, apply for that program and get admitted. Then contact your ACM state coordinator, who will help complete the process. To find your coordinator, just go to the Web site and click on your participating state.

What if the program I'm interested in isn't part of the ACM?

Just ask — you may be able to add the program you want. Contact the ACM state coordinator in your home state to learn whether the program may be added. Your coordinator is listed on the Web site.

* SREB states include: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia. Texas, North Carolina and Florida participate in the ACM at the graduate level only.
